FREEHOLDER BOARD HISTORY

The First 125 Years

From the date of the earliest English settlement in West Jersey, which was founded by John Fenwick in 1675, there is no written record of Freeholder activity until April 13, 1724. Minutes were kept of a meeting of four Justices and sixteen Freeholders. Two Freeholders represented each of the eight municipalities of Salem County of the day. These were Alloway's Creek, Pilesgrove, Mannington, Penns Neck, Salem Town, South Side Cohansey, North Side Cohansey, and Elsinboro. The Old Court House on the corner of Broadway and Market St. in Salem was built in 1735.

The Charter, an Act of the State of New Jersey, dated February 13, 1798, incorporated the Boards of Chosen Freeholders for Bergen, Essex, Middlesex, Monmouth, Somerset, Burlington, Gloucester, Salem, Cape May, Hunterdon, Morris and Cumberland Counties. Duties of Freeholders included responsibilities to build bridges, locate roads, erect almshouses, and administer to the poor, provide County Court Houses, license school teachers, loan money, supervise hangings, collect taxes, and provide militia men to the cause when called by draft.

Regular meetings of the Board were held semiannually and entitled Freeholders to $1.00 in fee. Fines were levied against members absent. Special meetings were held on occasion.

The Next 180 Years

1796– First State-approved, Freeholder-financed Poor House was a converted farmhouse/tavern near "Lakeview." A building specifically built as a Poor House was completed in 1808.

1813– The Board ordered the County Clerk to arrange all county papers and documents in case the British invaded Salem and forced the Freeholders to evacuate.

1817– The Court House was expanded and rebuilt.

1819– Public election continued Salem Town as County Seat.

1845– It was voted to erect a Poor House (after the 1808 structure had burned down), which was also to accommodate the insane. The State reimbursed the County $1.00 per week per insane person so committed. Trustees of the Poor House could be selected from the Board membership and were paid a fee for attendance at meetings. An adjoining insane asylum was built in 1870.

1853– The hanging of Samuel Treadway is recorded in detail. Gallows were designed and drawings made part of the record. Sixteen special officers and eleven constables were appointed by resolution to provide security inside & outside the jail yard. Many seemed determined to leave their assigned posts to witness the execution. The Board deemed any officer leaving his post would not be considered hired.

Although the execution was under the direct supervision of the Board, several members declined to witness the death penalty. The Sheriff escorted the prisoner to the scaffold where several clergy conducted the religious ceremony. Two minutes of solitude were allowed the victim alone on the scaffold before his execution. The clerk made distinct note of the prisoner's calm resign to his fate and recorded that death was instantaneous with the fall of about four feet.

1864– The County Seal was designed and adopted. Bonded indebtedness for the County occurred. (This is contrary to popular belief that Salem County has never been under bonded debt.) Bonds in the amount of $248,000 were authorized to provide 291 militia men for the 1863 draft. The following year the draft quota was approximately doubled.

The monies were bounty funds to be employed for volunteers from the ten municipalities into the 24th Regiment of New Jersey. Each recruit received $30-$50. Toward the end of 1864, $300 was paid for the service. Subsistence for the wives and families was also granted. Many times substitutes for drafted men were hired. On one occasion, a special committee was appointed to infiltrate the rebel states to hire recruits.

It is noted the County budget rose from $20,000 before the Civil War to $150,000 during the war. The major costs of County government, excluding the Civil War period, were for bridge building and care of indigent persons. In earlier days, $2,000 of a total $4,700 annual budget was for the poor.

1855– State school aid to the county was begun. Early grants equaled $3,000 for the entire county. The surplus funds were invested in private mortgages and the interest from the same was distributed to the townships for education use.

1879– Regular monthly meetings, in our modern concept began.

DESCRIPTION OF SALEM

Salem County lies in the southwest corner of our great state of New Jersey. It is bounded by the Delaware River and Bay to the west and the Maurice River to the east. Oldmans Creek creates nearly half of Salem County's northern border, while Stow Creek runs along a portion of its southern divide. Salem County's natural features include six rivers, more than 34,000 acres of unique meadow and marshland, tidal and freshwater wetlands, 40 lakes and ponds, bay beaches, dunes, expansive woodlands, a critical underground aquifer, numerous streams and important headwaters. Salem County covers 338 square miles with nearly half of the land actively farmed. It also boasts a population of less than 67,000— the lowest population and the lowest density per square mile in New Jersey.

Salem County's rich legacy of historical places and events, its vast array of natural resources and open spaces, its stable farming community, growing creative sector and strong economic job base all contribute to a quality of life for Salem County residents that is unparalleled in New Jersey. Salem County's Board of Chosen Freeholders is committed to the preservation of Salem County's rural character. The Board is dedicated to pursuing balanced growth and to encouraging economic development that is compatible with Salem County's vision for the future. The strong work ethic of its people, the County's prime location in the transportation corridor, and the accessibility to the metropolitan market all enhance our opportunities for carefully planned growth.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders remains responsive to the needs of Salem County's residents. Our community college, county-wide emergency response services, state-of-the-art landfill, correctional facility, upgraded administrative offices, "one-stop-shop" agricultural center, and college-prep academies at the county vocational-technical school are examples that attest to the high caliber services provided by the County. Through trained and dedicated employees, Salem County provides knowledgeable, efficient services to Salem County residents within a reasonable allocation of budget dollars.

As we continue into the next millennium, the Board of Chosen Freeholders welcomes the opportunity to demonstrate its flexibility and firm resolve to meet new challenges for Salem County- "The Garden Spot of the Garden State."
